

FCC:

I am an active Internet user and wish to enjoy voice communications services. I do not think that Internet voice communications should be regulated by the FCC, since it is of an entirely different nature of the PSTN. The FCC would not offer any benefit to American taxpayers by regulating voice communications conducted over the Internet. American Internet users do not need any protection that the FCC would attempt to offer by regulation.